

LIKES PHOENIX—PUTS IN NEW RESTAURANT

One of the neatest and best equipped restaurants ever opened in Phoenix is "The Woodrow Coffee Parlors and Delicatessen", located at 8 West Adams, just a few doors east of the Santa Fe office. Its modern equipment contains several new devices and features seldom seen outside of the larger cities, and enable all sanitary requirements to be observed. The interior is prettily decorated in blue, white and gold, and is very attractive.

The proprietor of this new institution is Curtis H. Brown, formerly of New Haven, Kentucky, who came here recently to visit Phoenix and the Salt River valley and incidentally to spend the winter. Local conditions were so attractive, however, that he decided to locate, and this new restaurant is the result. In addition to the regular restaurant service, the "Woodrow" will operate a delicatessen department. It will also remain open after the theaters close, to accommodate the show-goers. Named for the president of the United States, the "Woodrow" certainly should win its share of patronage, and Mr. Brown reports that he is more than pleased with the business being done.

CRIMINAL CASES TODAY—The first of the criminal cases for this term of court, will come up before the superior court today. The first few days of the present session have been taken up with trying several civil cases. The county jail at present is full to capacity, and it is thought that the coming trials will thin out the number considerably.

OLIVE MARKET NOT AFFECTED

Political Capital Made of Depression in Trade—No
Cause for Anxiety, According to Heim's Information

Some time ago there was circulated in California, for political purposes, a story that the olive industry had been seriously damaged by the new tariff regulations. As a result, there was some anxiety here in the Salt River valley regarding the future of this industry.

So C. L. Heim of the Camelback Nursery, one of whose specialties is olives, wrote to the famous Fancher Creek Nurseries at Fresno, California about it.

That part of the reply which refers to the olive situation is as follows:

"We are mailing you under separate cover a little Bulletin which we have just issued on the olive and which we trust will be of interest to you. The information you have received regarding the olive situation, is wrong. Will state, however, that there was a very heavy crop last year and owing to the shortness of money, a good many packers could not borrow enough money to take care of the entire crop. We know of no instance where any one lost first-class fruit, and as we understand it, now practically all the olives left over are going into oil.

"Some varieties like the Ascolano and Sevillano were sold as high as $200 per ton, the per lb. The price on Mission and Manzanillo Livest to the factories run from $100 to $150 per ton. Some of these, however, were under contract. There is a big acreage going out in olives this year. This we know from the amount of trees sold and the many inquiries this season.

"We consider the olive proposition one of the very best here in California in favored locations. The only trouble with the planters is they received too much money for their fruit the last two or three years. They are not willing to come down and take price even though money is scarce, and that is the only reason they are kicking. We have seen the time when people were glad to get from $60 to $80 per ton for fruit and were perfectly satisfied. Many fruits have a black eye this season and that of course is due to money stringency and the war in Europe.

"Our main crop is well cleaned up this season, but dried peaches are not selling at all. In fact, the growers are not able to get the cost of production out of their peaches this year. This is practically due to the fact that there is no export on dried fruit to Europe. "FANCHER CREEK NURSERIES CO.

EXPLAIN FIGURE EIGHT ON SKIRT OF VIRGIN

Tucson Cathedral Mystery Cleared by Story of Priests

Instead of being a miraculous portent prophesying the end of the Mexican revolution, according to a fanciful story brought from the City of Mexico, the appearance of the figure "8" on the skirt of the image of the Virgin of Guadalupe in the Tucson Cathedral has been explained by local Catholic priests by the statement that the figure has always been there, but that it had not been noticed before until attention was called to it by a curious story telling of the end of the Mexican war that emanated from the Mexican capital, says the Tucson Star.

The explanation also accounts for the appearance of the figure "8" on many images of the virgin in local homes.

The explanation has satisfactorily ended an apparent mystery that promised to become inexplicable that had in two days become a tremendous sensation among residents of the city who saw in the appearance of the figure a supernatural manifestation disclosing the time that the Mexican revolution would cease. The beginning of the whole matter started in a curious story from Mexico City. It seems that a young girl was praying devoutly before the image of the Virgin of Guadalupe in one of the churches of the city when she suddenly laughed out loud in a fit of uncontrollable laughter.

The priest, supposing that she was making sport of the holy image, reproved her sternly.

"No Father," she exclaimed, "I am not laughing at the image, but with joy. I have had a vision that tells me that the revolution will end on the eighth. See the figure '8' on the image."

With that she dropped over dead. The priest looked at the image and saw himself the "8" that the girl had indicated.

Suddenly demented by the strange occurrence he became insane and in his wild ravings told others of the affair. They took it to mean that the Mexican revolution would end on February 8.

This story arrived at Tucson the first of the week, and immediately those who heard it went to the Cathedral to see if the figure "8" had appeared on the image of the Virgin of Guadalupe at the lower part of the skirt. Sure enough it was there, and they went away filled with amazement, telling others of the strange manifestation. Others came until there was a crowd in front of the image at the southwest corner of the Cathedral all of the time.

Having seen the figure on the Cathedral image, people went home to see if it had appeared on the images in their homes and what seemed more wonderful, they saw it on the images in their houses for the first time. By Tuesday the matter had become a sensation and crowds thronged the Cathedral to look at the mysterious figure "8" that they had never seen before. As there was no other explanation at hand, many people in Tucson took it to mean that the revolution would end on February 8, although no month was mentioned.

The local Catholic clergy, surprised at the influx of visitors at the Cathedral Tuesday, began to investigate the matter and gave the explanation that the figure "8" had always been on the image but that it had never been noticed by the people until attention had been called to it by the story of the young girl and her death. In support of their explanation, Father Duval has a magazine published in Mexico City in 1895, which gives a minute description of the image of the Virgin of Guadalupe and states that the figure "8" appears on the lower part of the skirt. This explanation appears to clear up the matter satisfactorily as it also accounts for the appearance of the figure on the smaller images in the homes, all of which are made according to regular rules.

What the real meaning of the figure "8" on the image is, is not known by the local priests who have investigated the matter. They are quite sure, however, that it does not have anything to do with the Mexican revolution. They will be quite glad to have the explanation generally accepted also.

"We are glad to have people come to the Cathedral," Father Duval said yesterday, "but we would rather that they come to pray than to look at the figure '8' on the image."

MODERN SLUGGARD

In youth I did not care to play
Or study, dance or sing;
What others did from day to day
Bored me like anything!
I did not like to shout or fish,
Or round the girls to smirch;
And this was still my earnest wish
"May I not have to work!"

The drama was to me a bore.
Books held for me no charm,
And later in a shop or store
I viewed with wild alarm
I only loved to sit and dream
With idly folded hands,
And try to figure out some scheme
To dodge all toil's demands.

Well, that is why I'm sitting here
Within my sumptuous den;
I have succeeded year by year
In using other men.

While others used their muscle, I
Used them to gain my pelf;
I have one valid reason why
I don't like work myself!
